

Battle of the Automobile Age as Kyriakides and Kelley Duel at Cleveland Circle

Johnny Kelley, left, and Stylianos Kyriakides not only had to battle each other in the Marathon yesterday, they also had to duel a maze of automobiles. Here they are shown framed by the offspring of the machine age and end of gasoline rationing as they raced side by side into Cleveland Circle, Brighton. A few miles further along Beacon st., the Greek dashed away from Kelley and on to victory. (Photo by Jack Williams, Post staff photographer)

WHEN THE RACE WAS OVER AND WON

DON'T FENCE ME IN

Here they are—the road grinders themselves, just before the start at Hopkinton yesterday, and all fenced in in the old cinder. Just so they wouldn't be bothered or hampered with, this new feature was added to the 34th

Here is the scene in the dressing room after the B. A. A. Marathon was over yesterday and Johnny Kelley, right, who finished second, congratulated Stylianos Kyriakides, the winner, at left. With them are George Demeter, friend of the new champion, and Governor Maurice J. Tobin, the Marathon's No. 1 spectator.
