Schools to Boost Sailing as Sport

Plymouth, Quincy Leaders Seek North Shore Support By FRED FOYE

Sailing as a school sport may never rise to challenge 7th RACE lootball in prominence but it is a fact that it IS a school 8th RACE sport. Plymouth High and the two big Quincy schools, Quincy High and North, not only have official sailing Narragansett Handicaps leams, but they're looking for competition from the likes of such sea-view schools as Gloucester, Marblehead, AND TODAY'S SCRATCHES swampscott, Hingham, Fairhaven, the Cape schools, and my others which might like to duplicate a good idea.

Beyond that those schoolboy sailors have one other major de-sire—to own an official school boat. As things are now the sailing classes and teams at each school depend upon use of boats owned by families of team mem-bers. Each school, the Quincys in particular, is anxious to own a comparatively large sailing craft, 25-30 feet or so in length be used for large training

Saturday's victory, he passes over with a shrug and the com-ment, "I did only what I had to." It was necessary for him to run 26 miles 385 yards faster than he had ever traveled before-and he did. It was necessary to stand off the challenge of one of the gamest little runners on the macadam today—and he did. It was necessary for him to win this 50th running of the B.A.A. marathon-and he did.

All that was only a means to an end, and now that end is in sight. It is now necessary for him to edition of t start on an odyssey to solicit for ALLMAN his desolate countrymen. And he
