Session Three

Delivering Humanities Scholarship

The purpose of this session is to continue to showcase the research of humanities scholars and the intermediaries who serve them with this time special reference to their outputs. Obviously, the monograph must be and is central but the six presentations range more widely from the digital humanities to metadata and infrastructure. There is an emphasis on open access, but all speakers have been asked not to forget humanities journals and their role and the enduring usefulness of the print book. Each speaker has been asked to talk about what interests them/what they think is important and given 15 minutes to do this in with no effort to achieve a comprehensive picture, but the intention is that the bigger picture will be arrived at in discussion among the group and those attending.
